

CASE STUDY

A women-centered community, built around the land

How The Motherline turned earth-stewardship videos into a real membership.

SWIPE →

WHO THEY ARE

Rooted in Oregon.

The Motherline is a non-profit agricultural sustainability project that had been running youth classes for 15 years before grant funding turned its teaching into short films.

THE CONNECTION

Beyond their own valley.

Membership let them welcome people far past the Illinois Valley into a women-centered community learning to live closer to the earth.

WHAT MEMBERS GET

Skills you can actually use.

Members watch instructional videos on goat husbandry, cheese-making, permaculture gardening, water systems, and fermented foods.

HOW IT WORKS

Two ways to join.

A $10/month membership or a $150 lifetime tier, with content restriction keeping members-only videos for the people who support the work.

IN THEIR WORDS

“Before we started using PMPro, we weren’t a business at all.”

Cindy Palacios, Co-Director

Read the full case study →