OWNERSHIP

What happens when your platform changes the rules

It's not a matter of if. It's when.

Every platform changes eventually.

New ownership. New pricing. New priorities.

Features removed. Terms updated. "Improvements" that break what you built.

Who struggles when this happens:

- People who built their entire business inside the platform
- People who can't export their member data
- People whose integrations depend on features that disappeared
- People with no backup plan

Who adapts when this happens:

- People who own their data
- People who can migrate their members
- People who built on open tools with alternatives
- People who thought about this before it happened

This isn't about being paranoid.

It's about being realistic.

Platforms serve their own interests. Sometimes those align with yours. Sometimes they don't.

Build like the rules might change.

Because they will.

Not fearfully. Just honestly.